REVIEW

Pre-Review

A publishing coordinator will work with you from submission to publication. They will read your case and teaching note and provide feedback in preparation for a faculty-member review.

Academic Content Review

Your case and teaching note will be reviewed by one or more faculty members from the Ivey Business School. Between reviews, you may be asked to make revisions to your case.

REGISTRATION

Ivey Copy Editing

Once any required revisions have been made, your case and teaching note will be accepted! Your publishing coordinator will then send the material to an Ivey copy editor. You will be involved in this process and asked to respond to editor questions and suggested revisions.

Quality Assurance

After receiving your input in the copy editing process, your publishing coordinator will send your case and teaching note to a second Ivey copy editor for quality assurance.

Author Approval and Publication

At this stage, final copy editing will be completed and you will be given a final draft for approval. Your case and teaching note are then made available on our website and through our distributors. Congratulations!

“I love writing cases. I love telling stories. It’s an engaging way for students to learn, but also for me to share with other instructors opportunities to teach.”
